We all live with other people’s expectations of us. These are a reflection of their trying to understand us; they are predictions of what they think we will think, do and feel. Generally we accept the status quo, but these expectations can be hard to handle when they come from our families and can be difficult to ignore, especially when they come from our parents/partner.

Childhood obesity has become a serious problem in this country as children consume more sugar-based food and spend less time getting the necessary exercise. Many parents have questioned schools’ decisions to allow vending machines which dispense candy and soft drinks. Many schools, though, have come to rely on the money these machines generate through agreements with the companies which makes soft drinks and junk food.
In the last federal election, 61% of eligible voters cast a ballot. That’s a frightening lack of interest by the electorate, but is nothing compared to the turnout in provincial and municipal elections, which show even lower turnouts. It’s difficult to believe there’s so little interest in elections. In Canada, we’re fortunate to have polling stations within a short walk or drive. There are volunteers more than willing to provide rides to someone unable to walk or who doesn’t have a car.
